

Subject: Show Cause Notice – Performance & Professional Conduct

Dear, Huzaifa Hakeem

This letter is being issued as a formal Show Cause Notice regarding concerns about your attendance and professional conduct during your training period. You joined the company on 1 March 2026, and it has been recorded that you were on leave on 4 March 2026 without following the proper procedure for taking a leave. Furthermore, it has been observed that on 18 March 2026, you worked from home without obtaining prior approval from either the HR Department or your reporting manager. It is important to reiterate that Work From Home (WFH) is not permitted during the training period under any circumstances, making this a direct violation of company policy.

As you are currently in your training period, you are expected to strictly adhere to attendance policies, maintain professional discipline, and ensure timely and proper communication with both HR and your supervisor. Unauthorized absence, along with failure to comply with clearly defined policies, raises serious concerns regarding your reliability, commitment, and understanding of organizational expectations. Additionally, your work performance during this period has not met the standards expected from you, which further reflects a lack of engagement and seriousness towards your assigned responsibilities.

Such conduct adversely affects workflow coordination, team efficiency, and the overall learning process expected during your training period. Consistent presence, active participation, and full compliance with company policies are essential to successfully complete this phase.

You are hereby directed to submit a written explanation within (3 working days) from the date of this notice, clarifying your position and outlining why disciplinary action should not be taken against you. Failure to respond within the given timeframe or submission of an unsatisfactory explanation, may result in further action as per Company policy — including, but not limited to, termination of employment.

We encourage you to treat this matter seriously and take this opportunity to reflect and demonstrate your commitment to improvement.

Sincerely,
HR Department
